

The lecture and poster prizes were generously sponsored by the University Book Shop (Dunedin), AJ Park and the Otago branch of the NZIC, and were presented by Professor Jean-Marie Lehn (James and Jean Davis Prestige Visitor to the University of Otago, Nobel Prize 1987), Dr Duncan de Geest (AJ Park) and Professor Sally Brooker (chairperson of Otago branch of NZIC).

James and Jean Davis Prestige Visitor Scheme, University of Otago

The award for the best emerging researcher lecture went to Callum Smits, “Structural plasticity underlies promiscuous interactions between BH3-only proteins and the pro-survival protein A1”, Department of Biochemistry, University of Otago. The prize included the Professor Jean-Marie Lehn autographed book, “Supramolecular Chemistry” (UBS), excellent wine (AJ Park) and a certificate.

The award for the best emerging researcher poster went to John Pauwe, “Supramolecular calix[4]arene linked fullerene-porphyrin triads”, Department of Chemistry, University of Auckland. The prize included the Professor Jean-Marie Lehn autographed book, “Supramolecular Chemistry” (UBS), French bubbly (AJ Park) and a certificate.

Left to right: John Pauwe, Professors Sally Brooker and Jean-Marie Lehn, Dr Duncan de Geest.

The award for the best emerging researcher poster communicator went to Jennifer Burgess, “The silver-alkene interaction as a supramolecular synthon: vinylbenzene based assemblies”, Department of Chemistry, University of Canterbury. The prize comprised excellent wine and a selection of chocolates and truffles (Otago branch NZIC), and a certificate.

The awards for the best established researcher posters went to Dr Stephen Sowerby, “Big jobs for little holes”, Australo Limited, and Dr Warwick Bowen, “Cavity quantum electrodynamics with monolithic microresonators”, Department of Physics, University of Otago. Both won a bottle of French bubbly (AJ Park) and a certificate.

Left to right: Dr Stephen Sowerby, Dr Warwick Bowen

Refreshments at the afternoon poster session were generously sponsored by the MacDiarmid Institute.

